

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY EVENING, FEB. 17, 1882.

A BILL has been presented in Congress establishing a marine hospital at Portsmouth, Ohio.

GOVERNOR CAMERON, of Virginia, has signed the Riddleberger Repudiation Bill and it is now a law.

SERGEANT MASON, the soldier crank, who had an inspiration to remove Guiteau is to be tried by court-martial immediately.

An application has been made to the Supreme Court of Tennessee to permit the funding to proceed if the bonds have not attached coupons receivable for taxes.

It is intimated from Washington that Gen. Burbridge is to have a hand in giving out offices in Kentucky. It is now in order for Burbridge's "old friends" to make themselves known.

THE Virginia Readjusters are quarreling fiercely over the distribution of offices by Mahone in that State. The dissatisfaction is great and promises to permanently divide the ranks of the Repudiators.

THE contested election case of Cannon against Campbell, is now in the hands of the House Committee on Elections, who will, it is believed, adopt a resolution declaring Cannon entitled to the seat. In such an event it is thought an effort will be made in the House to expel him from that body, on the strength of the recent anti-polygamy action of Congress.

A DESPATCH to the Enquirer from Washington says: General Hazen, Chief of the Signal Service, has written a letter to Senator Johnston, recommending an appropriation to defray the expense of establishing and maintaining a system of "frost" warnings for the benefit of farmers. The idea is that the Signal Bureau shall publish indications of coming frosts, and it is claimed that this would be especially beneficial to tobacco farmers.

THE Kentucky postmasters are still on the tenter-hooks, awaiting the pleasure of the president, who appears to be in no haste to relieve their uneasy minds. What the result will be is mere guess work as the president has kept his own counsel well and admitted no one to his confidence. It is believed, however, that the appointments will be made with a view to restoring harmony in the party in this state. This week will probably see the end of the suspense.

Columbus and Maysville Railway.

A letter was received here this morning, from a gentleman at Hillsboro, Ohio, who has been prominent in inaugurating the Columbus and Maysville Railway enterprise, conveying the encouraging information that the company is working hard and with some prospects of getting arrangements made for the completion of road at an early day. The letter also announced that the writer and other gentlemen of Hillsboro, including President Bell, would arrive in Maysville on Monday evening or Tuesday morning, to consult with our citizens, interested in the enterprise, as to things which need to be done.

THE CONFESSION OF ELLIS.

Deputy Marshal Heflin, Who Arrested the Murderers, Tells Something About the Matter and Burnett's Story—The Right Man Caught.

Courier-Journal.

In yesterday's Courier-Journal was published an interview taken from the Cincinnati Enquirer relating to the Ashland murder. It is the opinion of Alf. Burnett, a detective of Charleston, W. Va.

Yesterday afternoon a Courier-Journal reporter called on Mr. Heflin, the Deputy United States Marshal, who arrested Ellis, Neal and Craft. When asked for information regarding the statement of Burnett, Mr. Heflin said that the statement was the most ridiculous one he had ever heard in all his experience, and went on and gave his version to the affair.

"Mr. Powell came to me at the hotel at Ashland and informed me that he had a man in his employ whom he thought knew something about the murder. I sent for Ellis and he came to me at my room, and I had a long talk with him. After talking with him I went out, leaving him in the room, and brought in the committee of citizens—Mr. Campbell, Mr. Russell and Mr. Collier. This committee had been appointed to defray all expenses that might occur in the investigation of the horrible crime. Ellis had a talk with them and gave them to understand that he knew something about the affair. I did not arrest him then, but let him go until about dark. The excitement was so great amongst the populace that I was afraid the mill hands would mob him if they only got hold of it that he was implicated. We let him go home until dark, and I then went out and brought him in again about seven o'clock, and while I was out arresting Craft and Neal he made his confession, as published, to Mr. Campbell, cashier of the National Bank, at Ashland. I did not know anything about his confession until I came back from arresting Craft and Neal, and right here I wish to say in regard to Ellis' being forced to confess at the point of a pistol, it is a lie and I deny it most emphatically, and a "dam'd lie" at that. The confession had been made in my absence.

"As far as regards nobody knowing that Miss Thomas went to Mrs. Gibbons' until late at night, that is another falsehood. She went there about four o'clock, because, Mrs. Gibbons went to Miss Thomas' mother about two o'clock in the afternoon in order to see if Miss Thomas could stay at the house with the children while she went to Ironton to see her (Mrs. Gibbons' mother).

"In regard to the negroes: That was a scheme fixed up by me to draw Mr. Burnett off into the mountains. My reason for doing this and getting up this nigger scheme was that Burnett was monkeying around there and getting in the way, and I wanted to get him away so I could work up the case without having him nosing around. When I put him on the nigger scheme he went to West Virginia and tried to make a case out on the three niggers I suppose. They had worked on the railroad near Ashland, and I knew that they had left there three weeks before the murder, because I had traced them to Huntington, Va., and found out that they had been away from the scene of the tragedy for about three weeks.

"In regard to Mr. Burnett and his men doing so much valuable work in sifting this matter, allow me to say that the only man he has got is himself. If he had any they were not know to myself or any one in that part of the country.

"Burnett, so the paper says, thinks Ellis is a crank and insane. I know one thing: if I was out looking for fools, cranks or lunatics, and was to meet Ellis and Burnett in the road, I would certainly take Burnett to be the man I was looking for. I think the tool-killer made a mistake and did not get all he was looking for when he made his rounds.

"The confession was made before three of the first citizens of Ashland, Boyd county, Ky., and was communicated to me by Mr. Campbell when I back from arresting Craft and Neal. The secret of the whole matter is that Burnett wanted to make a good stake out of the committee. Why, he drew for $9.50 on the committee on the strength of the nigger scheme, and I would not let the committee pay it, and I suppose that's what is the matter with him."

This closed the interview, and before the reporter left Mr. Heflin informed him that, if necessary, he would attach his signature to the statement.

THE failure of H. O. McKenyon & Co., grain dealers at Chicago, is announced.
